DHS hosts special guests

On August 1, DHS hosted 37 senior-ranking military officers from 40 countries who were visiting Pittsburgh as part of the National Defense University's (NDU) International Fellows Program. Marc Cherna, DHS director; DHS deputy directors; and Kyle Craig, a program administrator for child and family health programs representing the County Health Department, spent the morning speaking with the fellows about health and human services offerings in Allegheny County.

In a thank you email, a representative from NDU wrote, "The presentations from Mr. Cherna, Mr. Craig, and the DHS department directors were very insightful to our international fellows; you saw from the questions that they were very engaged with learning about how your departments provide services to residents of Allegheny County. It is our intention with these field studies trips to give our students a broad view of different places and institutions in American life; this comprehensive briefing and discussion helped us to achieve that objective and added to our students' understanding of the United States."
