Major Market Index Performance

5-years period ending 2020 - Large Cap stocks were the best performing equity. Russell 1000 15.6%.

5-years ending 10-Years Ago – Fixed Income, TIPS were the best performing asset class.

The rebalancing that has been recommended is a recognition that asset classes come in and out of favor.Trimming from the areas that perform best and adding to areas that have not performed is a way to balance the risks in the portfolio.

Domestic Equity Style Index Performance

5-years ended 12/31/2020 - Large growth companies performed the best.

5-years ended 15-years ago – 5 years after the tech bubble, Russell 1000 Growth performed poorly.

Last year the market performed well with information technology leading the way. In recent months, including the 4th quarter of 2020, the smaller capitalization and value oriented equities have outperformed. Diversified exposure to various asset classes is recommended to create a balanced portfolio that can perform well when different asset classes or styles are in favor.

AndCo Consulting Memo – The LPP is currently funded with $28.5 million. The portfolio maintains exposure to capital markets through investments in ETFs and has a current weighted average fee for the underlying ETFs of 0.08% annually. The investment in LPP is available with next day liquidity for the needs of the Allegheny County Employees’ Retirement Plan.

Market Update

As of February 28, 2021, table of returns Equities, Fixed Income and Key Rates.

Equities - Reflects a rebound from some of the mixed results in January 2021. S&P 500 was up about 2.76%. This is reversal from what we saw throughout 2020 where larger cap stocks did better than their smaller cap counterparts and where growth did better than value. Russell 1000 Growth Index down (0.02) % where the Russell 1000 Value Index was up 6.04%.

Fixed Income - US Aggregate index was down (1.44%). As interest rates go up bond prices go down so that is where we see those negative results permeating within the fixed income marketplace. The Federal Reserve met this week and reaffirmed their longer-term commitment to keep rates lower.

Asset Strategy

Ed Boyer

Expected realizations and flows back into the portfolio might look like the current estimates, running between $19 and $21 million now that includes about nearly $9 million that came in in January from Cory. In addition to that were also estimating have another $4 to $6 million from the managers. Continue to gather fee data as requested, the fund to funds is taking a little longer to deliver. Capital Calls are hard to estimate, and Mr. Boyer will try to gather that data also.
